HIST 3121 Polish History Since 1800 4 Credit Hours

This class offers students a chance to study 19th and 20th century Polish history. We look at how the most prominent ideals of what it means to be Polish – framed as a discussion between the Romantics and Positivists; the Fighters/Insurgents and Realists; the Old and New – affected the perceptions on honor, heroism, and Polish patriotism. A critical evaluation of these models leads us to evaluate the most important historical events in the last two centuries of Polish history – a country with impressive history of openness and multiculturalism as well as grim chapters of xenophobia. Centered on the role of individuals in shaping history, this class also reflects on the identity of Poles – citizens of a country located at the cross-roads of Eastern and Western Europe.

HIST 3122 Poland - Study Abroad 3 Credit Hours

This is an interdisciplinary course led in major Polish cities. The trip begins in Kraków, and then continues to Warsaw, Łódź, and Gdańsk. While there, the class will explore various and often conflicting, aspects of Polish and Polish-Jewish history. Visits to these historical sites will be accompanied by appropriate primary and secondary source readings and documents. During the course of the trip, students are expected to actively participate in ten scheduled seminar meetings as well as numerous lectures and workshops with local historians. While on the trip, students will have the opportunity to experience Polish culture; traveling on local transportation, sleeping in local hostels and hotels and eating in local cafeterias and various eateries.

HIST 3125 Modern East-Central Europe 3 Credit Hours

This class offers introductory knowledge about the history of 19th and 20th century East-Central Europe – often called the lands-in-between – in particular Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Romania. It helps us understand major European phenomena from the perspective of smaller European states. We will focus on important historical moments, ideologies, and concepts that formed the area and affected the local identities.

HIST 3130 Armenia Ancient Medieval World 4 Credit Hours

The course is a general survey of Armenian history and culture from the pre-historic period to the early sixteenth century, with emphasis on Armenia's political, economic and cultural interrelationships with other countries and peoples in the Near and Middle East, Europe and Central Asia. The course analyzes how the major political and demographic shifts in world history impacted Armenia and the Armenians. Each era of Armenia history is discussed in terms of developments in the surrounding countries. Students will develop and strengthen research and historical thinking skills by exploring these topics through multiple perspectives of gender, class, religion, and ethnicity to better understand challenges facing the world today. (AY).

HIST 3368 Germany Since 1945 4 Credit Hours

This course covers the history of Germany since World War II. It examines 1) the postwar period and the legacy of Allied occupation; 2) the process by which Germany was divided and the period of its division, tracing the histories and divergent characters of East and West Germany; 3) the different ways in which both the Cold War context and the legacy of the Third Reich shaped the German experience of twentieth-century revolutions of society, culture, and sexuality; 4) Germany's re-unification after 1989; and, finally, 5) the subsequent challenges in identifying a newly united but increasingly multicultural Germany's place in a unified Europe, focusing on issues of immigration, national identity, and citizenship. (OC).

HIST 338 State Feminism in the Modern Middle East 4 Credit Hours

Starting in the late 19th Century governments in the Middle East began responding to calls to open new opportunities for women in society, less for the benefit of women than for the benefit of "the nation" and the men who led it. By the middle of the 20th Century women's movements across the region were pushing for full equal rights, testing the original limits of state feminism. This is the story of that process and its complicated legacy.

HIST 3380 The European City 4 Credit Hours

This course explores key features of modern urban life through the history of the European city. Topics include city planning, the development and changing uses of public spaces, policing and social control in the city, and intellectual and artistic responses to the urban environment. Core readings focusing on London, Berlin, and Paris are complemented by student research projects on cities of their choice. Investigations focus on understanding what it means to live in an urban society, and how the history of urban development can help us better understand today's urbanized world. (AY).

HIST 3385 Sex, War, and Violence 4 Credit Hours

Full Title: Gender, Sexuality, and War: Conflict and Violence in the 20th century. This course centers the often overlooked role of gender and sexuality in the 20th century European mobilizations of state violence such as the Holocaust, Armenian Genocide, and conflicts in the former Yugoslavia. It emphasizes the clashes that occurred between gains in gender and sexual rights during the century and projects of state violence that were frequently aimed at dismantling these gains. Attention is paid to the intersection of race, class, religion and gender in the (re)construction of new gender and sexual hierarchies in conflict and post-conflict contexts in the region. (OC)

HIST 339 The Late Ottoman Empire, 1789-1924 4 Credit Hours

The course is general survey of the history of the Ottoman Empire from the reign of Selim III, beginning in 1789, until the abolition of the caliphate in 1924. The course will examine such topics as modernization; imperialism; the rise of ethnic nationalisms among the empire's Christian and Muslim subjects; decocracy; ideologies like Ottomanism, pan-Islamism, Islamic modernism, and pan-Turkism; and changing ideas about gender. (AY).

HIST 345 West Africa Since 1800 4 Credit Hours

A history of the West African peoples since 1800, which focuses on their unique cultural heritage. (YR)

HIST 3603 Introduction to Latin America: Utopia to Autocracy 4 Credit Hours

What we call Latin America today, is a vast geographical region just as diverse as its people, its languages and its cultures. So, what does Latin America really mean? This course seeks to engage students in the interpretation of primary texts, cultural and historical artifacts (letters, chronicles, essays, news reports and films) that provides a glimpse into 500 years of a continent in the making. This course will address the fact that this identity construction comes from the stands of authority grounded in notions of race, religion, class and gender. But also, these discourses from power are in a constant struggle with the marginalized people and their faint voices to ultimately unveil a multifaceted perception of a cohesive continent. This course will explore 300 years of its Colonial period, the fracture of the territories into independent nations, and a tumultuous 20th century that led to autocratic discourses of the 21st century. (OC).

HIST 361 U.S. Economic History 4 Credit Hours

HIST 3631 America and the Middle East in the Age of Empires 4 Credit Hours

This course examines the history of American engagement with the Ottoman Empire and Iran from ca. 1700 to 1920s. Even before the United States became a superpower, it had military conflicts, trade agreements, and an expanding missionary, diplomatic and economic presence in the Middle East. It is in this period that we find the roots of American interest in Zionism, the oil industry in the Middle East and the strategic importance of the Middle East to American interests. In a parallel fashion, America begins to shift in Middle Eastern societies' thinking from being at the margins of their responses to European imperialism to being either a model ally or a new threat. (YR).

HIST 3632 America and the Middle East in the Age of Nation-States 4 Credit Hours

This course will examine the expanding role of the United States in the Middle East from the aftermath of World War I through 21st Century attempts to reduce America's "footprint" in the region. This is a complex history of nation-states emerging from the disruptions of European imperialism only to be embroiled in the Cold War, the "War on Terror" and the uneven impacts of globalized trade and energy markets dominated by influence of the United States. Each society in the Middle East has had to embrace, resist, or co-opt American power as part of managing even the most local of modern challenges. We will compare key episodes that illustrate this range of responses. (YR).

Prerequisite(s): COMP 106 or COMP 220 or COMP 270 or COMP 280

HIST 3634 History of Islam in the US 4 Credit Hours

This course traces the long history of Islam and of Muslims in the United States (1730s-present), paying careful attention to the interaction among Muslims across the dividing lines of race, gender, immigrant generations, sect, political orientation, and class, and between Muslims and other Americans. HIST 3672 Public History in Arab Detroit 4 Credit Hours

Full Title: Public History in Arab Detroit. This course explores the field of public humanities work while providing a topical focus on metro-Detroit based Arab American history and culture. Roughly half of the course will be used to explore different approaches to public humanities work undertaken by scholars. The second half of the course will provide the historical and social context for understanding a particular research question to be examined jointly by the instructor, students, and a local cultural institution. Students will engage in intensive research and work with a cultural institution to represent their findings to the public. Students cannot receive credit for both AAST 3151 and HIST 3672. (W, YR).

HIST 3673 Arabs & Muslims in Media 4 Credit Hours

This course examines how perception of Arabs and Muslims took shape in the U.S. from the late nineteenth century through the present. Using historical developments as a conduit, we explore the treatment of Arabs and Muslims in news outlets, print media, film, and T.V. productions. For example, we analyze the motivation, plot construction, casting, and content of big budget Hollywood movies for patterns of stereotypes and representations/misrepresentations. (F,AY)

HIST 3675 Palestine and the Palestinians in the Levant and the U.S. (1870-1970) 4 Credit Hours

In this course, students learn that Palestine has boundaries and that Palestinians have a history. This course examines Palestine's temporal and spatial history and the emergence of Palestinian consciousness. Participants learn about the specific and unique elements of the Palestinians' experiences within broader regional contexts of Ottomanism, colonialism, and immigration to the U.S. from the Levant. These developments coincided with narratives of Arabism, and Zionism over a century. A specific Palestinian identity developed at the turn of the twentieth century in response to these narratives on both sides of the water. In the U.S., political advocacy became intertwined with efforts to belong as U.S. citizens. (W, OC).

HIST 3676 Arab Americans Since 1890 4 Credit Hours

This is a survey of immigration from the Arab Middle East from 1890 to the present. Readings from available scholarship, discussions, and reports facilitate exploring the Arabic-speaking immigrants' early and recent experiences as art of U.S. society, including settlement, work, worship, military service, leisure, intellectual life, and primary and formal affiliations across the U.S. (OC).

HIST 368 African American History II: 1865-Present 4 Credit Hours

The history of blacks in America is traced from the Reconstruction era and the rise of Jim Crow segregation to the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's and the current period. Special attention is paid to the migration of blacks to the north and the social-economic situation which they encountered there. (AY).

HIST 369 Civil Rights Movement in Amer 4 Credit Hours

A survey of race relations and civil rights activity from the late 19th century to the present. The principal focus, however, is on the period since World War II, especially on the mass-based Southern civil rights movement (1955-1965) and the various policy debates and initiatives of the past thirty years, most notably affirmative action and busing. We also examine critiques of non-violence and integrationism. (AY).

HIST 3695 American City 4 Credit Hours

This course examines the development of urban America from the European-style port cities of the colonial period through the edge cities of today. The bulk of the course focuses on the late 19th and 20th century urban environment with an eye towards understanding the diverse residents, cultures, economies, and geographies that have shaped American cities. We cover everything from developments in transportation, architecture, business, and technology to immigration, politics, and urban culture. (AY).

HIST 399 Independent Studies in History 1 to 4 Credit Hours

Readings or analytical assignments in history in accordance with the needs and interests of those enrolled as agreed upon by the student and instructor. (F,W).

HIST 4200 History and Trauma 4 Credit Hours

This research seminar focuses on the key problems related to the concept of trauma and history. It covers in-depth examples of historical events, such as genocides or natural and man-made disasters that affected societies in a deeply traumatic way. While analyzing the nature of these events, we also ask about the ways individuals and societies remember, how various generations deal with the difficult past, and what strategies they employ as a response. We ask about the sociological and cultural significance of memory and oblivion; suffering and heroism; repression and any sense of guilt. In addition to examining various repercussions of a difficult past, we also ask about how historians approach the questions of historical trauma – what questions they ask, what sources they use, and which tools allow them to connect the complex past with the present. (OC).

Prerequisite(s): HIST 300

Restriction(s):

Can enroll if Class is Junior or Senior

HIST 4401 Seminar: African Diaspora 4 Credit Hours

Research seminar on the history of the African Diaspora in the Atlantic World. This course covers examples of classic texts in the field, as well as significant new scholarship, with an emphasis on critical reading, analysis, and the development of an independent research project. Students gain a deeper understanding of the significance of the African Diaspora in the New World, derived from lectures and discussions providing an overview of this subject, as well as the micro views gleaned from sharing classroom presentation about students' individual research topics. The graduate version of this course includes weightier readings and assignments, with a research paper for potential publication. (OC).

Alongside the most influential academic studies of Iran, this course uses cultural sources (such as literature and film) as windows on the pivotal social and political movements in Iranian history since 1800. This study of cultural change factors in cultural debates inside Iran, the growth of the Iranian Diaspora, and the increased presence of Iranian culture in electronic media. Additional assignments distinguish the graduate version of this course from the undergraduate version. (OC).

HIST 4650 Does Women's History Matter? 4 Credit Hours

This seminar explores the development of the field of Women's History, primarily through the lens of the U.S., with an emphasis on recent trends in the field. Students read some of the best scholarship of recent years as well as learn about the origins and development of the field. We also examine how women's history functions in the broader political and cultural landscape by considering current debates around gender and the role of women's history in popular culture. Students hone their skills at dissecting and using scholarly literature and apply the resulting knowledge to current trends and debates in the world around them. For the course research paper, students use their understanding of the field – its guiding concepts, foundational texts, newest trajectories, and impact – to answer the question of whether "women's history" is still relevant. (OC).

Prerequisite(s): HIST 300

HIST 4677 Arab American Identities 4 Credit Hours

Beginning with an overview of the contemporary history and social developments in the Arab Near East, we survey immigration from the region to the U.S., and examine a range of evidence for understanding how Arab immigrants became an integral part of U.S. society. We examine immigrant narratives and immigration paradigms, to appreciate the successes and challenges Arabs and Arab Americans encountered. Readings and discussions explore various disciplinary approaches for understanding Arab Americans' experiences with race/ racialization, ethnicity, national attachments, sex, and gender. (OC).

HIST 4678 Middle Eastern Diasporas 4 Credit Hours

This course explores the diasporas of Arabs, Turks, Assyrians, and Iranians living in Europe and the Americas that have occurred since the 1880s. It pays careful attention to how "aspects of diaspora" shape, mimic, transect, and undermine the political and economic regimes of which they are part. The reception of Middle Eastern communities in different national contexts and historical periods receive special attention as do their adaptive strategies as religious, ethnic, gendered, and racialized minorities. Those enrolled in the graduate level of the course pursue additional readings and assignments. (OC).

HIST 490 Sel Topics Seminar in History 3 Credit Hours

Examination of problems and issues in selected areas of history. Title as listed in Schedule of Classes changes according to content. Course may be repeated for credit when specific topics differ. Primarily, but not exclusively, for undergraduate history concentrators. Students are introduced to current issues in the area of historical research and learn how to appreciate selected writings, which represent the best of recent scholarship. (OC).

Prerequisite(s): HIST 300

HIST 497H History Seminar 3 Credit Hours

This course is unlike other courses offered by the history discipline in that its primary function is to introduce students to the process of intensive historical inquiry with its end being the production of a high-quality, original research paper. As a seminar, it is intended for advanced concentrators who will research their own specialized topics within the intellectual community of the seminar?providing support and enrichment for the other class members. The general theme for the semester is ? Microhistory.? Within this general rubric we will be focusing upon three major issues: 1) Microhistory as a tool of historical investigation/analysis [i.e., what is microhistory?], 2) the advantages/disadvantages of this approach to historical inquiry [what can it reveal for us?], and 3) employing the technique to produce a discrete microhistorical study [how do we do it?]. The overall purpose of this micro-level approach is to provide a distinct, readily accessible medium through which to consider broader historical trends.
